

Workshop: Critical Race Theory and the Care Practitioner

Time: 90 minutes

Speaker/Presenter: Dr. Nathaniel Currie, DSW, MSW, LCSW

Assistance Professor, Clark Atlanta University, Whitney M. Young Jr. School of Social Work

Adjunct Professor, Simmons University School of Social Work, Doctor of Social Work Program

Clinical Supervisor/Grant Manager, National AIDS Education and Services for Minorities (NAESM)

Antiracism social work: Empowerment practice with vulnerable populations

- I. Introduction
 - a. Presenter background
 - b. Learning goals
 - c. Introductory case example
- II. Body/content
 - a. What place does CRT and Empowerment practice have in the helping professions?
 - b. Intersectionality continued
 - c. Use of self
 - d. How my identity shows up in practice continued
 - i. Your authentic self
 - ii. Safe & Brave spaces
 1. How to create them [skill build lesson]
- III. Body
 - a. Anti-racist practice
 - i. CRT
 - ii. DEIPAR
 - iii. Afrocentric Perspective
 - iv. Empowerment Practice
 - b. Anti-racist practice in the helping professions
 - i. Social Work
 - ii. Nursing
 - iii. Other helping professions
 - c. Social justice work embedded into clinical/healing work
 - d. How our authentic self is the beginning of antiracist [clinical] practice
 - i. Use of self continued
 - ii. Critical consciousness
 - iii. Relational cultural therapy and practice
 - iv. How to show up (authentic self)
 - e. [Planned activity]
 - i. Debrief
- IV. Wrap Up